

Fall TV Shows by Staff Writer

Fall brings season premiers of our favorite TV shows and new shows like Melrose Place, Glee, and ever since the Twilight saga, the premier of Vampire Diaries, but don't forget about our favorites, 90210 and House are also back with exciting new seasons. The 90's hit Melrose Place returns with a modern twist. The young adult cast lives in an elegant apartment in the middle of Los Angeles. The series features veterans of the TV screen, Ashlee Simpson and Josie Bisset, also starring new actors Colin Egglesfeild and Stephanie Jacobson as the main protagonists. Egglesfeild's character may have murdered the landlord of Melrose Place. Catch Melrose place on Tuesdays at 9pm on the CW.

For a new show, Glee seems to be a big hit for the high school audience. An optimistic teacher, Will Schuester's (Matthew Morrison) goal is to save McKinley High School's Glee Club from obscurity, while offering his help to unlikely students to reach their true potential. Including top stars like Lea Michelle who was previously the star of the late Broadway Show Spring Awakening. Catch the club on FOX at 8. Every other kind of villain out there does not stand a chance next to vampires these days. Ever since the Twilight saga began, everyone could not get enough of the blood sucking monsters, and Vampire Diaries is no different. It stars Nina Dobrev, who falls for the new student Stefan Salvatore, who acts in a bizarre way when she goes to the cemetery to where her parents are buried. But Stefan has a dark secret, he is a vampire. If you want to know what happens between them, it's on the CW at Thursdays at 8:00.

90210 premièred September 8, with recurring actors Shena Grimes (Annie), who also starred in Degrassi, and Lori Laughlin (Debbie), who played Rebecca on the hit 1900s family show Full House. The new love interest for Naomi, played by Matt Lanter, is certain to stir up some drama in the second season. Catch it on the CW, channel 11, on its second season on Tuesdays at 8pm.

Our favorite doctor is back with its most anticipated new season. House is on its sixth season and does not look like its going to be cancelled anytime soon. Gregory House (Hugh Laurie) is back, solving the most mysterious diseases that no other doctor can stomach. New episodes are on Mondays on the Fox Network, channel 5 at 8pm.

All and all, the new shows and our old favorites are here and seem to be a big hit!
